Art Unit: 1724

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 25-29, 31, 34 and 38-43 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over WO 96/40857 in view of Herman et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,190,855). WO 96/40857 discloses (see Figs. 20B and 20C; and page 15, lines 22-30) a fluid processing set for use in photoactivation treatment of a biological fluid, which processing set includes a plurality of containers connected together with openable flow paths. This reference further teaches that the first container is made of a material which is translucent to light in the photoactivating wavelength range (see page 84, lines 10-11); and also teaches providing an adsorbent material for removing excess photochemical agent and photoactivation by-products from the biological fluid (see page 84, lines 15-20). This reference also disclosed that the adsorbent could be housing in a separate treatment container (see page 75, lines 4-6) as required by claim 28, or within a semipermeable pouch in the storage container (see page 84, lines 3-4; and page 201, lines 12-14) as required by claim 29. This reference further teaches providing a holder (i.e. housing 100) for the disclosed containers (see Fig. 1; and page 115, line 12) as required by claims 40 and 41. This primary reference still further teaches connecting containers with plastic tubing containing frangible connectors (see page 78, lines 25-28), as now required by claims 42 and 43. Applicant should note that since all of the above noted components are assembled at some point in the primary reference system, these components are deemed to be "pre-assembled" as now required by the claims of this application. Accordingly, this primary reference discloses the claimed invention with the exception of the light impermeable overwrap for the photochemical agent container. Herman et al. discloses a system for treating a biological fluid with a photoactive material, and further teaches enveloping a container of the photoactive material with a light impermeable overwrap (see col. 2, lines 45-52). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the system of the primary reference with the light impermeable overwrap of the secondary reference, in order to prevent photo-degradation of the photoactive material in this primary reference system.

Applicant's arguments filed June 21, 2004 have been noted and carefully considered but are not deemed to be persuasive of patentability. Applicant argues that WO 96/40857 does not expressly disclose a pre-assembled processing set because the containers in this reference system appear to be connected or joined sequentially as the process is carried out. It is pointed out, however, that since all of the recited containers will eventually be connected together in this reference system, i.e. prior to completion of the treatment process, at this point these containers will be "pre-assembled" as now required by the claims in this application.

Applicant also argues that the overwrap described in WO 96/40857 is for the removal device, not the container including the photochemical agent. Again, this argument has been noted and carefully considered, but no longer appears to be relevant in view of the new grounds of rejection.
